NFL Star Benjamin Watson is Pro-life

Ben Watson, tight end for the New Orleans Saints, has been outspoken about his pro-life beliefs. And as a recent story in Pregnancy Help News shows, he also acts on those beliefs. He and his wife gave a pregnancy center in Maryland a state of the art 3D/4D ultrasound machine. This center is located in a commercial building that used to house a late-term abortion facility. This center because of what the space used to be attracts many abortion-vulnerable women each year. This state of the art ultrasound machine offers pregnant mothers an understanding of the humanity of their preborn children and make informed decisions about their options.

Watson has condemned abortion and the practices of America's largest abortion business, Planned Parenthood. He has called abortion "the ultimate form of racism" drawing attention to the disproportionate abortion rates among minorities and the abortion industry's targeting of the Black community. Watson once stated, "We sit here and talk about advancing the black agenda, whatever that means, we talk about our interests, and what's important to us - like having political power and advancement and all those things - and then we are turning around and we are killing our children. And we are buying the lie that it's our personal decision to make."

Watson, who spoke at the 2017 March for Life, has said previously that there are other pro-life players in the NFL but many are unwilling to speak publicly about their convictions. Watson, through his words and actions, has shown that elite athletes can use their celebrity to help the most vulnerable.

Oprah in her July issue of "O" magazine featured "Shout Your Abortion" movement and its attempt to normalize the killing of unborn babies. This movement gives the impression that women are glad they aborted their unborn babies. Does she not know Margaret Sanger's reason for starting Planned Parenthood?

The Pro-life Movement is Winning the Battle

How have we come this far? There's sound justification for optimism because there are multiple reasons why we are winning the battle. Here are 13 reasons.

1. Ultrasound - we are on the second generation of Americans whose first baby picture was taken by a 3D/4D ultrasound.
2. The wounded - both mothers and fathers who have experienced abortions are now some of the best ambassadors on behalf of babies.
3. Former abortion industry workers - this group of individuals is growing and they are sharing their stories and changing the hearts of the public.
4. Grassroots network of local chapters - the pro-life movement has become polished and highly effective. Its diverse breadth represents people of all walks of life including ethnic, economic, political, and faith based or secular backgrounds.
5. Community health centers - an expansive network of pro-life resources offering free medical services, mentoring, job training, and other assistance.
6. New technology - different social media has enabled the movement to do an end run around biased media.
7. Digitalized information - easy to use educational information.
8. America's next generation - are more pro-life as demonstrated in the March for Life in Washington DC that attracts over 100,000 participants, an easy 2/3 are 25 or younger.
9. Blacks and Hispanic - they have exposed Planned Parenthood's agenda for targeting minorities and the disadvantaged.
10. Adoption - traditionally closed now includes a totally open process. This gives birth mothers a higher comfort level of choices which makes adoption more appealing.
11. Election of a precedent number of pro-life candidates - this is on school boards, city councils, state legislatures, governors, Congress, and White House.
12. Legislation - hundreds of pieces of pro-life legislation have passed in states, a compelling factor in reducing the number of abortions.
13. Pro-life education - great advancements in education. This is responsible for lighting a fire of passion in individuals, enabling elected officials to thrive, and empowering men and women to say no to abortion.

From Our Files

A young lady came in with two beautiful daughters. At that time she and her husband were separated. They were both engaged in relationships with other partners. Her pregnancy test was positive. She wants to get back with her husband so this baby will have to be terminated. She doesn't know if he would come back to her or if he is presently starting a family with the new girlfriend. When asked if she would find out before she does anything, she wasn't sure. She was afraid he didn't want her back. This situation isn't that unusual. One client in this same situation did have the baby and her husband did take her back and claimed the baby as part of the family. She came back to the office to visit and it was very obvious that she was still full of guilt about the situation that the volunteer became concerned about the baby and her bonding.

A woman came in after having been to Planned Parenthood. She said they did a test and even an ultrasound. Both showed she was not pregnant. She hadn't had a cycle in a couple of months. She just had to know so she came to us, the test we gave came back positive. God guided her steps to us. She stated she wasn't sure about what she was going to do but she did stay and talked about it for over an hour. Usually if they stay that long they aren't completely wanting to end it. There is a desire to have the baby. The father says it isn't a good time but as was shared with the client that is she is having any misgivings she should listen to her heart and continue the pregnancy.
